Who we are

In 2015 Training & Manufacturing Group was formed to provide the skills and tailored business support for member companies. The group is a consortium of like-minded companies, bound together by a shared vision to:

“Deliver world class advanced engineering skills and business support strategies through hyper-local collaboration.”

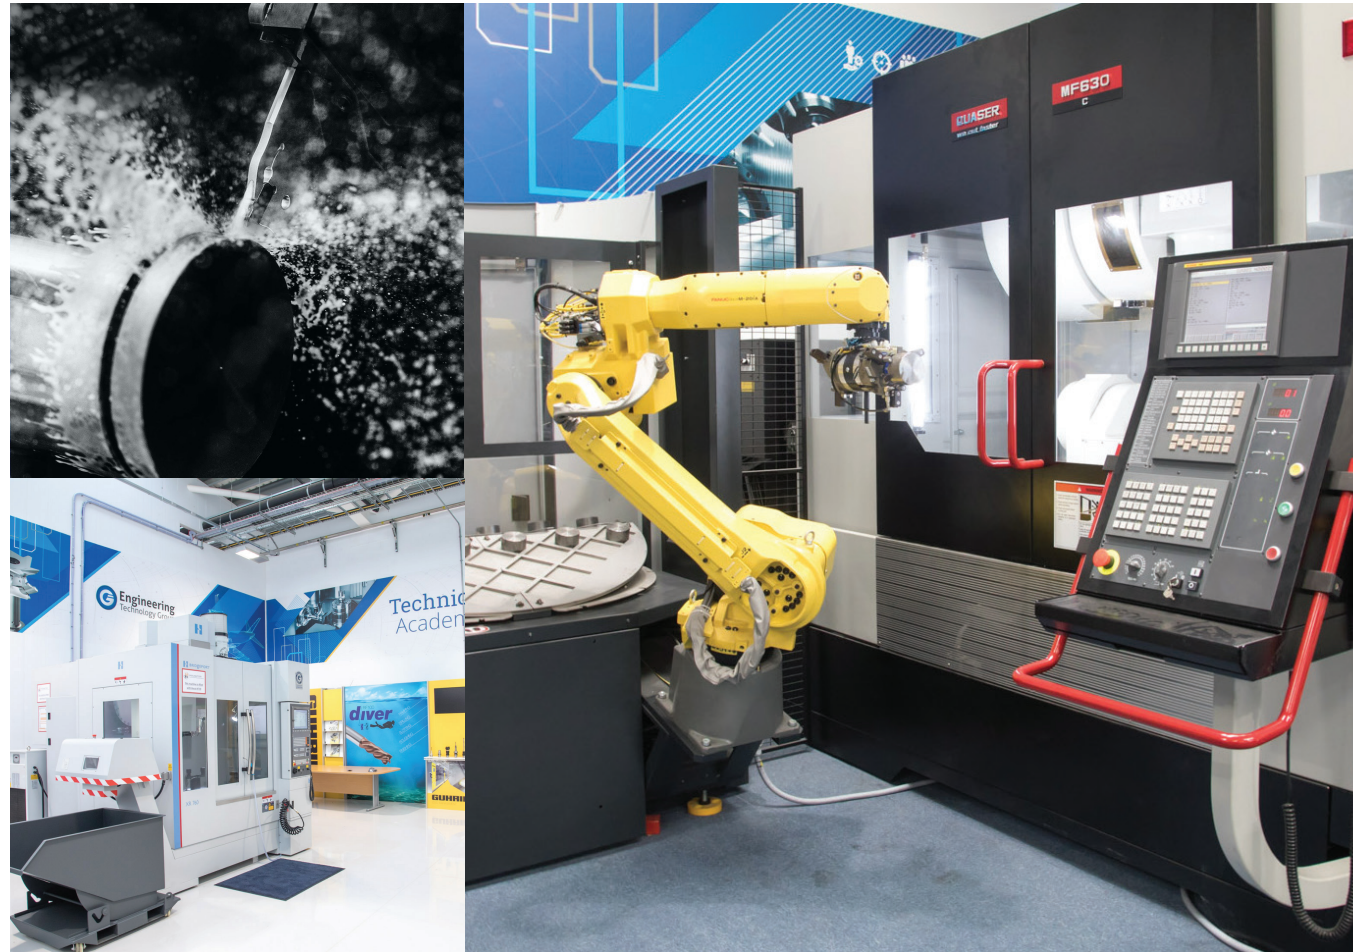

The group is a non-profit organisation and exists to enhance the performance of our members.

Our History

The In-Comm Training & Manufacturing Group developed from 3 separate Associations; West Midlands Group Training Association, Group Manufacturers Association & Birmingham Group Training Association. The Group Associations were founded in the 1960's as charitable organisations to provide comprehensive training resources and health & safety advice to their members, with the support of In-Comm Training.

During 2012 / 2014 the local Group Training Associations merged so as to co-ordinate, integrate and focus services to provide a sustainable platform going forward and to develop common and cost effective partnerships for all our member companies. In 2015 Training & Manufacturing Group was formed to provide the skills and tailored business support for member companies.

On rationalisation, Training & Manufacturing Group retained its charity status and is managed by an executive committee, alongside the groups Technical Partners.

Membership

TMG has varying levels of membership ensuring the group is open to all, from small businesses just starting out, through to multi-national companies. Our members cover a wide range of engineering and manufacturing sectors from automotive and aerospace to oil, gas and nuclear.

“The group is a valuable resource for small businesses to identity training requirements, best practice methods and routes for funding”
